

English daily newspapers in Chicago that are authorized to use the union label.

If the trust can suppress The Day Book, its next victim would be The Press—which also has a habit of printing truths the trust newspapers don't like to have the people know.

This war on The Day Book and Press started Monday, when the old newspaper stands on Madison street were hauled away by a trust wagon, and new stands substituted which left no room for The Day Book and Press.

Evidently the game was to make the same change all over town.

But The Day Book was growing too fast to suit the loop and trust press, so coarse work was resorted to and the police order went out to suppress The Day Book.

The order was given by Capt. Gibbon, in charge of the traffic squad.

The Day Book* will fight to a finish for free speech and a free press in Chicago.
